 The P80 designation is confusing what with Polymer80 and all.

 The whole gun is a throwback p80 was the original designation for the austrian military.

 Considering when you search "Glock P80", the first half of the page is now this product, I am sure they are hating this.

 I imagine it was purposeful.

GLOCK GOES RETRO THE GEN 1 GLOCK 17 IS BACK!

On ignorant youth, the world is not a joyous place. The time has come for you to dispense with the frivolous pleasures of childhood and get down to honest toil until you are sixty-five. Then and only then can you relax and collect your social security and live happily until the time of your death!

I think it's 2 fold. It's the original 1980's design (technically started in '79, but they're claiming it started in '80 now... since it was released in '82) -- but also and more sneakily, a way to make polymer80's harder to find in google.

That represents the last time Glock was innovative. Since then variation/changes have been cosmetic for fear of ruining their reliability reputation. Basically unchanged since 1982. Imagine what they could have done if they had continued innovating and challenging the accepted norms.

Submission Rules

- Include the name of the gun in the title. (Yes, even if it's obviously an AR) For images containing numerous firearms, provide context in the comments.
- Only submit static images.
- Videos, collections, interactive images/websites, and articles are not allowed.
- Do not submit a shortened link using a URL shortener like tinyurl.
- GunPorn is for hand held firearms only.
- Make sure your image is hosted by an approved host.
- Original source is allowed and preferred over the approved hosts. If your submission is not on the list of approved hosts, but it is an original source, please use the tag [OS] so your submission is not removed in error. If your image is rehosted from another approved host it will be removed.
- If you took the photo yourself, you can signify this by using the tag [OC] (original content) and after 24 hours you will be given special flair. If you don't receive flair after a few days feel free to message the mods.
- If you have any questions check out the FAQ.

It's not a polymer80, it's a Glock P80 Gen 1, confusing since p80 is now known as polymer80
